NEW WEBSITE

LAUNCH REFLECTS LORIEN'S GROWING ASPIRATIONS

Lorien Engineering Solutions, the engineering design and project management specialist, has announced the launch of a new corporate website to reflect its growing vision as an international organisation.

The website www.lorienengineering.com showcases Lorien's burgeoning reputation in the food, brewing, drinks, and pharmaceutical sectors, in addition to waste and sustainable energy. The new site has been given a complete design and layout revamp, and features informative new content, along with enhanced navigation and usability.

Lichfield-based Lorien provides tangible business benefits to global clients by delivering their critical capital investment programmes to strict safety, cost, programme and performance criteria. Clients are thereby able to deliver on increased yield, lower cost of sale, and the launch of new products.

Lorien's Operations Director Bill Treddenick has led the online development and believes the new site better reflects the firm's key messages and global capacity:

"As we extend our reach to customers throughout Europe and beyond, it is vital that our website effectively communicates who we are and our capabilities in working with customers both in the UK and around the world.

"The new site offers customers, partners and the industry easily accessible information on everything from our people and our skills to career opportunities and our latest news."

The site was designed by Silktide Studios of Derby.
