International support for independent bakery

A UK bakery has called upon the skills of compliance experts at Lorien Engineering Solutions to complete a multi-million pound development. Cheshire-based Frank Roberts &

Sons has been working with engineers at Lorien on an automation project to secure its position as a cost-efficient bread supplier.

Compliance engineers at Lorien have now been engaged with final stages of the development to extend the existing process and packaging plant, working with the bakery's international equipment suppliers.

Tony Reynolds, compliance manager at Lorien, has been working with a bread slicing and bagging machinery supplier in Los Angeles and a basket conveying system engineering company in Christchurch, New Zealand. He says, "Neither supplier had any experience of the Machinery Directive 2006/42/EC as required for CE marking, so Lorien stepped in to ensure the machinery met the relevant EU legislation. By preparing the documentation for the CE Technical File, we can ensure employees are using safe and approved machinery."
